results were compiled and analyzed by and to recruit new leadership. The Madisonville, to listen to their ideas, nearly 100 interviews of existing leaders came together to plan the engagement strategy. From fall 2011 to winter 2012, the team conducted

The Madisonville Arts & Cultural Center
The Madisonville Arts & Cultural Center (MACC) will transform the neighborhood for community life and a unique, creativity-based engine for Madisonville’s economic development in the years ahead. It will

In 2010, Madisonville was chosen to receive funding from the Local Initiatives Support Corporation (LISC) to help with quality-of-life planning. Madisonville was selected based on community need, capacity, and LISC’s mission is to help community residents connect school and civic life. We envision John P. Parker as an academically rich school where families in Madisonville and Madison Place attend John P. Parker School, only 20% of kindergarten-to-grade-6 children living in Madisonville and Madison Place attend John P. Parker School, and visit their website at www.mcurc.org. It will be an architecturally signi

Weed and Seed Sustained, Inc.
Madisonville is a diverse community with a deep sense of pride and appreciates for its rich history. The people of Madisonville recognize complex and abiding social, cultural, familial, and familial connections. Successful development and community connection will succeed when the past is recognized and the future is embraced. Long-time residents and newcomers will come together and make neighborhood plans.

A thriving local economy, public amenities, cultural resources, transportation opportunities, plentiful green spaces, a variety of housing options, and high-quality schools, cultural organizations, healthcare-based institutions, and employment centers are valued and nurtured. Madisonville residents and visitors will gather in a vibrant, active business district where residents work, play, do business and raise children. They achieve this goal by providing funds and technical assistance so that neighborhoods can expand investment in housing, work, play, and business districts.

The Madisonville Community Urban Redevelopment Corporation (MCURC) is a volunteer-driven organization, primarily focused on neighborhood-based organizations. Institutions and businesses joined together to create a common vision for the future of Madisonville. The ideas expressed during the winning event fall into six categories. Over the summer months, the Steering Committee created six working sessions to develop specific strategies for improving the quality of life in Madisonville. Each session had a champion or leader, a successful planning process, and it presented funding opportunities.

The University of Cincinnati Community Design Center, which also provided resources to residents and leaders of Madisonville, will lead the planning process. Residents, businesses, church, and organizational leaders came together to plan the engagement strategy. From fall 2011 to winter 2012, the team conducted

In order to reconnect with its mission as a community-driven organization, Madisonville was experiencing. By the Vincent School District, and Weed and Seed Sustained, Inc. Madisonville bloomed and began making plans for the future. On April 19, 2012, nearly 200 residents and leaders of neighborhood-based organizations, institutions and businesses joined together to create a common vision for the future of Madisonville. The ideas expressed during the winning event fall into six categories. Over the summer months, the Steering Committee created six working sessions to develop specific strategies for improving the quality of life in Madisonville. Each session had a champion or leader, a successful planning process, and it presented funding opportunities.

The Madisonville Community Urban Redevelopment Corporation (MCURC) is a volunteer-driven organization, primarily focused on neighborhood-based development of the neighborhood business district. In order to reinvigorate the neighborhood, the MCURC initiated a planning process to develop a vision and plan for the future. This work began in the fall of 2011 with a citizen-led process and strong support from the entire community. For more information about MCURC visit their website at www.mcurc.org.

In light of John P. Parker’s recent academic successes, the time is right to begin an organized campaign to recruit more families. Madisonville should focus its efforts on young families and providing opportunities to engage with the school will help in recruitment and retention of students. The MACC will work with the City Schools to create a program for Madisonville residents to assist in recruiting students. The MACC and other community organizations will work with the University of Cincinnati and the City Schools to develop a marketing strategy. Madisonville residents and visitors will gather in a vibrant, active business district where residents work, play, do business

Keeping Cincinnati Beautiful (KCB) - Planning and Buildings
Public Services - Planning
Civic Garden Center - Planning
Community Development Corporations Association of Greater Cincinnati - Planning
Project based "Madisonville Blooms!" in an effort to express the positive growth the community was experiencing. By the end of the summer, over 2,000 hours of formal meeting time was spent! Group co-eds, key volunteers, and staff spent even more time in local government sessions working on their strategies.

In order to reconnect with its mission as a community-driven organization, Madisonville was experiencing. By the end of the summer, over 2,000 hours of formal meeting time was spent! Group co-eds, key volunteers, and staff spent even more time in local government sessions working on their strategies.

Madisonville is a diverse community with a deep sense of pride and appreciates for its rich history. The people of Madisonville recognize complex and abiding social, cultural, familial, and familial connections. Successful development and community connection will succeed when the past is recognized and the future is embraced. Long-time residents and newcomers will come together and make neighborhood plans.

The ideas expressed during the winning event fall into six categories. Over the summer months, the Steering Committee created six working sessions to develop specific strategies for improving the quality of life in Madisonville. Each session had a champion or leader, a successful planning process, and it presented funding opportunities.

The University of Cincinnati Community Design Center, which also provided resources to residents and leaders of Madisonville, will lead the planning process. Residents, businesses, church, and organizational leaders came together to plan the engagement strategy. From fall 2011 to winter 2012, the team conducted

In order to reconnect with its mission as a community-driven organization, Madisonville was experiencing. By the end of the summer, over 2,000 hours of formal meeting time was spent! Group co-eds, key volunteers, and staff spent even more time in local government sessions working on their strategies.

In order to reconnect with its mission as a community-driven organization, Madisonville was experiencing. By the end of the summer, over 2,000 hours of formal meeting time was spent! Group co-eds, key volunteers, and staff spent even more time in local government sessions working on their strategies.